DESCRIPTION:

Don't Lonely Me is Heidi's second album on Wired Records featuring 10 new songs and a Ben Adorable remix of I Just Know.

"What we search for in other people is to be found in oneself or in your invisible friend" says Heidi in relation to her new album entitled from the song Don't Lonely Me, a title open for different translations.

In the year of making this album Heidi has been commuting back and forth between the danish Music Academy and her home in Berlin resulting in a kind of double life and mobile studio working process. While at the same time she's been playing concerts and producing songs for an upcoming band.

Talking about double figures both in sound and image it seems to be Mortenson's task to unite the extremes and balance opposites. The new album presents colorful and textured songs with a nerdy and charming aproach, it travels through new sound experiments and visits seriousness vs. self-irony in a twisted pop production.

"Tiger" is floating on a bossanova rhythmbox with sounds of a growling tiger, miaows and even an elephant's toot. "Music" is an ode to same and a modest disbelief in human marriage with a digital taste of the 80s. "Coincidence" is fairly dancy and deals with spontaneous decisions on a day with hangover that ends up being a really good day. "Hard To Say" proves how invisible rules modifies depending on our surroundings it features a double bass and various trumpets. "Girl Since I Met You" dares you to believe that you can overcome any previous love. Mortenson's alter ego the Nosnetboy is playing drums on "Hurt Machine". And one last thing: "Sphere" is spotting the future and realizing that things don't end but they change.

Camille, WR.
